A guest tells you they would like a glass of red wine that is light-bodied. They ask if you would recommend the Cabernet Sauvignon or Pinot Noir. Which would you recommend this customer to get?

1

Recommend the customer to get the Pinot Noir since this wine has a lighter body than cabernet sauvignon.

2

Let the customer know that both wines typically are similar in body types and so they cannot go wrong with either.

A guest asks for their wine to be decanted. You open the bottle and pour it into the decanter. How long should the wine be decanted before serving?

1

Let the wine sit in the decanter for approximately 15-20 minutes before serving to ensure it has properly opened up.

2

The wine can be served within 1-2 minutes and in some cases immediately after being poured into the decanter.
